NEW YORK, July 11.—Mid-summer dullness prevailed during the greater part of yesterday's stock market session, but the final hour was enlivened.

TODAY'S POEM
by Edmund Vance Cooke
THE SUBSERVIENT SEX.

Now when I was a restless lad
Each surging impulse which I had
Was held in leash, for I was told
My time would come, when I grew old,
But now my way—there was no other—
Must be determined by my mother.
And so I did
As I was bid
For surely, surely mother knew
The best way for her boy to do.

Through all my years of married life,
I bowed submission to my wife.
My own free will, my own free voice
Had spelled my fate and made my choice
And could I now
Forewear my vow,
Nor pay the duty which I owed
To her who kept our blest abode?

Then, shortly after middle age,
My daughter occupied my stage.
"What are your selfish wishes worth?"
"Was it her fault she came to earth?"
"Defer, good sir;
Defer to her,
"You've had your fling and your romance:
Now let the poor child have her chance!"

I thought my last few years might flow
In freedom on their way, but no!
The greatest tyrant of them all
Now holds me in her daily thrall.
Again the check
Is on my neck:
Again my forehead beats the dust,
When she—my grandchild—says I must.

GET A GARDEN BOOK

By arrangement with the International Harvester company The West Virginian has secured a supply of books on gardening prepared by the experts of that great corporation's extension department. These books tell how to start a garden, how to cultivate and care for it, how to kill the insect pests and how to meet every one of the difficulties that occur during the growing season, and at the end how to gather and store the produce. And throughout the instructions are made simple and easy to understand by many illustrations and diagrams. These books will be an invaluable aid to all gardeners, even the most experienced, and they will be a veritable life saver to the beginners. They will be especially needed in connection with the gardening articles printed each day in The West Virginian. Prepared and sold in the ordinary way these little books would cost at least 50 cents. But the West Virginian secured them at the manufacturing cost and while they last as a contribution to the Grow a Vegetable Garden movement one copy will be given free to each person upon presentation of the attached coupon properly filled out:

Notice the four stars on the shoulder of each of these fighting men—P. C. March, T. H. Bliss and J. J. Pershing. They are the only men in the American army since the Civil war who have been entitled to wear these stars. They represent the rank of full general, and the men are three of the only seven Americans who have won the title, the other four being Washington, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan. This is the first time in America's history that the nation has had three full generals at one time.

BREWERS WON'T BE ABLE TO GET COAL

WASHINGTON, July 11.—A serious blow to the manufacture of beer has been struck in the United States, not by prohibition action in congress, but by an order from the food administration, acting with the food administration and the war industries board.

There may be beer in the country for six months to a year longer, but after that time none until the fuel situation improves, probably none until the close of the war. Then it will be up to congress again.

And with the passing of beer will go all the near beer, the malt extract and other imitations made from cereals.

The order is not a prohibition measure in any way. It is a conservation proposition and first 100 per cent restriction on a non-essential industry. It will save the great stocks of coal used by the cereal beverage people for war industries, the huge quantities of their cereals for strictly food uses and their employees for work in essential industries.

It will be followed by other 100 per cent restrictions from the fuel administration against non-essential industries, in each case with the co-operation of the war industries board and where food materials are concerned, of the food administration. And in each case the United States employment service will step in to direct the output of work by the shut down.

The brewers recently had completed a voluntary agreement with the fuel administration by which they
